About the Presidents Award for Youth Empowerment

The President's Award for Youth Empowerment (TPA) is one of South Africa's leading youth achievement awards offering young people aged 14-24 across the socio-economic spectrum the opportunity to develop character, discover their purpose and determine their future to contribute towards building a great South Africa.

The Award was founded by HRH, The Duke of Edinburgh in 1956. The Award Programme was introduced in South Africa in 1983 under the banner of the Gold Shield Award, with Dr Ian Player as the first Chairman, and in 1994 it was re-launched as The President's Award for Youth Empowerment, with Mr Nelson Mandela as the founding Patron-in-Chief. His Excellency President Cyril Ramaphosa is the current Patron-In-Chief and Archbishop Desmond Tutu is the Patron.

The President's Award (TPA) is The Duke of Edinburgh's International Award for Young People in South Africa and is a full member of the International Award Foundation which oversees the Award Programme in over 130 countries globally, with 18 of these being in Africa. Globally there are more than 1.3 million active participants, approximately 300 000 in Africa and 10 000+ in South Africa.

TPA provides a framework of non-formal education and provides experiential learning opportunities to help young people discover talents that do not necessarily show up in the classroom context. The Programme brings together practical experiences and life skills, building confidence, encouraging physical health and recreation, and motivating young people to engage with their communities. The Award improves employability and access to tertiary education; the certificates are globally recognised.

The Gauteng Programme Manager (GP PM) oversees all of the Award Centres in Gauteng. The GP PM owns the delivery and support of promoting the reach, impact and expansion of the Award in GP. They translate the vision as directed by the CEO and Head of Operations into a clear strategy and implementation for the Award Centres in Gauteng. #### Realities of the role:

- Each day in this role will be different. We are not a traditional NPO!
- Collaboration is the name of the game. We operate in a highly functional team, and our ability to deliver an excellent Award experience is premised on our team's ability to collaborate, value the contributions of their teammates and see the value in the "rubbing of minds". If you do not find value in having your ideas interrogated or others weighing in on how things could foreseeably be done, you are unlikely to enjoy the role.
- Similarly, if you are not comfortable with other teams being accountable for different parts of the learning experience, you are unlikely to find this environment to be a good fit for you.
- Our Programme Managers are master multitaskers. They enjoy the pace and variety of Award Leader, parent and Award Participant engagements, coaching groups, monitoring multiple data points, collaborating with teams, dealing with special cases, and working on multiple systems — all in a day's work! If you prefer long periods of deep, uninterrupted time, you are unlikely to enjoy this role.
- Providing a seamless Award experience for students and parents often involves a lot of backend admin. The ideal candidate would have a pragmatic understanding of the value that administrative tasks bring to bear on the experience of the Award Participant.
- The ideal candidate will have an appreciation for how necessary it is to fail fast and fail forward, learn through iterative feedback loops, and embrace the process of continuous learning.
- Change is constant as a result of rapid learning cycles. If consistent change gives you energy rather than drains your energy, you are likely to thrive in this environment. Similarly, if you are adept at managing yourself in a demanding environment and understand the importance of self-awareness and boundaries in your work, you are likely to do very well.
